

REFLECTIVE NOTE SHEET

Common Core Support for ELA & Literacy with the SLS-supported TeachingBooks.net Database

Two authors or titles that my students and/or colleagues are reading for which I want to find multimedia resources:

1:

2:

Two ideas for supporting Common Core standards that I want to share with my administrators and colleagues upon my return:

1:

2:

Two strategies for supporting my school's library and literacy work that were mentioned in this presentation and that I want to try integrating into my own instructional work:

1:

2:

Two students or colleagues whom I want to show a resource or strategy from this presentation:

1:

2:

SUMMARY CHECKLIST: I now know how to do the following...

- Enable my students and colleagues to learn from authors of the books they are reading—online, anytime.
 - Provide my colleagues with relevant instructional materials about the books that they are teaching.
 - Help my students pursue their own personal interests in literature and informational reading.
 - Support the ELA and Library standards that my administration is requiring.
 - Reinforce the integration of technology and reading into all of my school's content areas.
 - Further the joy of reading for my students, teachers, and families, and everyone in my school community.
-

Access TeachingBooks.net by going to <http://teachingbooks.net/home>
Enter your school email address, and hit Submit.

Questions: Nick Glass, Founder, TeachingBooks.net (nick@TeachingBooks.net)
(800) 596-0710